STUDENTS SUGGEST THIRD PARTY POLICY

Next Forum Will Be Held Tuesday; "International Relations" Is Subject

More than 75 students attended the first student forum and heard James Shropshire, director of student publications, speak on "Campus Politics." Dr. Esther Cole, leader of the group, opened a discussion following the introduction of the subject by Mr. Shropshire.

Students suggested that the cleanest way for campus politics to operate would be for a third party comed of students, independent of posed of students, independent of their fraternities and sororities, to meet and select candidates similar to any third party movement.

It also was suggested that the two groups now competing against each other on the campus place more consideration upon the merit of their selection for class officers and other important positions on the

Dr. Amry Vandenbosch, head of the Political Science Department, will lead the discussion on international relations with an explanation of communism, fascism, nationalis and socialism as types of government Tuesday, March 6.

In this next meeting, the group will discuss the policies of Hitler, Mussolini, and the dictators of present day Europe together with the relationship between them, the possible results of the movements, and

Dean Evans Writes Article on Wills

Michigan Law Review Prints University Law Head's Discussion

An article written by Dean Alvin E. Evans of the Law school entitled "Certain Evasive and Protective Devices Affecting Succession to Decedents' Estates" has just appeared in the February issue of the Michigan Law Review.

The article deals with the question of whether persons interested under a will may refuse to have the will probated, or may have the will probated but refuse to follow its terms, or may legally contract not to contest a will. These are called evasive devices by which the desires of the testator are avoided. law also allows the testator cer-tain protective devices—one is the device of contracting with all per-sons to whom he leaves legacies that they will not contest the will. Another divice is the disposal of a gift by the will on condition that if the beneficiary shall contest the will he shall lose this particular gift.

Alabama's great quintette flashed 1 p. m. its best form of the tournament to coast through the Florida Gators, 41 to 25, in a comparatively easy game to win the Southeastern conbasketball championship Tuesday night in Atlanta. This makes the second conference title in basketball that the Crimson Tide has annexed in four years, and together with their football championship of last fall, it gives "Ole Alabam" two major titles in the Southeastern conference.

The game was rather uneventful with Alabama taking the lead soon after the game started. Walker and Connaster showed superb form to dominate the game and there was no doubt during the majority of the contest that the Crimson Tide would again come out on top. The Florida team played a poor but game type of ball, showing only at sporatic intervals the "flash in the pan" type of basketball that gave them a great upset win over an over-confident Kentucky team which had twice (Continued on Page Four)

Austria Is Reviewed by Franklin

Through the outbreak of civil war in Vienna on February 12, world attention was once more focused on the tragedy of post-war Austria. Up to that time Dr. Engelbert Dollfuss, Austria's dimunitive chancellor had succeeded in winning the world's sympathy (with exception of Ger-man Nazis) in his struggle against such great odds with the Hitlerites since last summer.

But through the ruthless suppression of Austrian Socialists in Vienna and elsewhere who were acting in self defense primarily and resulting in the loss of more than 1,000 lives including, in some cases, women and children, the Dollfuss government lost at one stroke the almost-universal moral support it had previously

THE TOURNAMENT

Shall the annual Southeastern conference tournament at Atlanta be allowed to continue? Will it, if some attempt to revive interest in the affair is not made, expire gradually by degrees?

These and other questions have been asked often of late by basketball fans and sports writers throughout the south, but as yet no one knows what fate awaits future attempts to prolong the yearly exhibition. The Kernel considers Coach Rupp's pian to be logical, and we believe that if the tournament continues to be held in Atlanta it will finally have to be abandoned because of finances. However, should it be decided that its location be changed to another city, we see no reason why Lexington can not make a bid for the contest.

BASEBALL

With the event of spring but a matter of a few weeks away, there is being formed on the University campus a decided interest in the age-old sport of the nation, baseball Still the national pastime, this game fills the need of a certain group which no other sport has seemed to successfully fulfill. Yet, on our campus there has been no team since

This is due probably more to lack of sufficient funds than to any other reason. It has come to be a sport which has not paid its way on the campus, it is said. This, we grant may be true, but so have other socalled sports. Would it be plausible to cancel all sports which do not show a profitable season every year's

With the interest being taken at the University this year it would seem highly desirable to form a team here. More than 40 boys have reported as being interested in playing if suitable arrangements could be made. Of these 40 boys, several entered the University because at that time there was a baseball team.

J. E. Griffing, manager of the local team has most graciously offered the use of his field free of charge to a University team for practice and games, and this seems to us a most opportune time for revival of this great sport

Despite the fact that the Wildcats were eliminated in the second round of the Southeastern Conference tournament, the sports writers named "Frenchy" DeMoisey and "Primer" Bill Davis on the all-conference team, selected at the close of the tournament Tuesday night.

The play of both in their one appearance in the meet brought favable comment from the fans and sports scribes alike, although both were decidedly off their usual form. This is the second straight year De-Moisey has been honored as he was also selected last year after the

In an endeavor to prolong the Basketball season, should the tournament be discontinued. Coach Adolph Rupp has laid plans which if successful would bring the Cat basketeers into contact with teams from all over the nation. Pittsburg, Notre Dame, Northwestern and other nationally known teams are being sought as Cat opponents for 1934-35, the Kentucky cage mentor intimated recently.

This is a step up the ladder to-ward giving the University national recognition in the sports world. This year's basketball team, while perhaps not the equal of last year's club, would put up a battle with any team in the nation and would not come off second best with the greater majority of them. The Hitlerites feel, however, that time is working in their favor and that Austria will unquestionably "go Nazi" in a few weeks' time so that their aims may be realized without risk and without an open struggle.

For the first time since Hitler assumed power in Germany, he has been drawn into a conflict with Mussolini who is greatly opposed to Austria's union with Germany since the Italian territorial gains in the Tyrol (the Brenner Pass, etc.) at Austria's expense, would most likely be jeopardized thereby. Further-more, Austria's increasing use of the Italian port Trieste would cease and her shipping be largely trans-
